

Hi there! I'm Billy, a private drum tutor with a passion for rhythm that dates back to my childhood. I've been drumming since the age of 6, and I haven't looked back since. My musical journey began with a deep love for rock music, drawing inspiration from iconic bands like Muse, Red Hot Chilli Peppers, and Nirvana to name a few.

Driven by my dedication to music, I pursued formal education and Leeds Conservatoire, where I studied music. I delved into various aspects of drums and percussion, including my specialisation in congas. This diverse range of knowledge and experience allows me to offer a well-rounded approach to drumming instruction.

Over the years, I've had the incredible opportunity to play in numerous bands, honing my skills and developing my own unique style. As a result, I've had the privilege of touring both in the UK and abroad, sharing my love for music with audiences around the world.

One of the most exciting aspects of being a drum tutor is the opportunity to explore different styles of music. While my roots lie in rock, I've expanded my repertoire and developed a deep appreciation for various genres, including Jazz, Funk, Latin and more.

Currently, I'm on tour with my band State of Satta captivating crowds across the UK at cities and festivals during weekend. When I'm not rocking on stage, I find immense joy in passion on my expertise to aspiring drummers. That's why on Monday's and Thursday evenings, you'll find me at TMR, sharing my knowledge and teaching drums.
